"Secret Service - The Invisible Government - The McCone Apparatus - Battle Behind the Scenes - School Along the Canal" by Endre Sumegi

Who directs the policy of the United States? Most recently, Douglas Cater poses this great problem in his book. He was not the first to deal with the problem.

At the time in 1788 when Alexander Hamilton, James Madison, and John Jay argued in New York for the adoption of the constitutional structure of the United States, De Witt Clinton prayed as follows: "My Lord, save us from the individual decisions of great leading individuals, from the tyranny of the rich, and from the pleasure of the tax collectors, which we cannot keep in hand." In what follows we will try to analyze the extent to which the higher powers have heard the plea of De Witt Clinton.

The CIA, the American intelligence service, appears as the first negative factor in the analysis. Fred J. Cook, one of the American experts on the problem, has written: "By its very existence the CIA cuts the arteries of power in the American political system and denies those concepts with which the system operates. No one exercises effective control even over the budget of the CIA. The citizens have no opportunity of knowing what deeds it carries out, not in their name for there is no
